12 HAND-MADE COLUMNS FOR SALE

A LANDMARK

Twenty years ago, David Engwicht began transforming his entire yard into a public park, which today is known as Civosity Park.

The columns at the front have become a well-known landmark

It took David two years to make the original, then cast them in concrete.

The mold has since been destroyed, so these are the only ones that will ever exist.

The front of the house is to be remodeled, so these one-of-a-kind columns are now for sale.

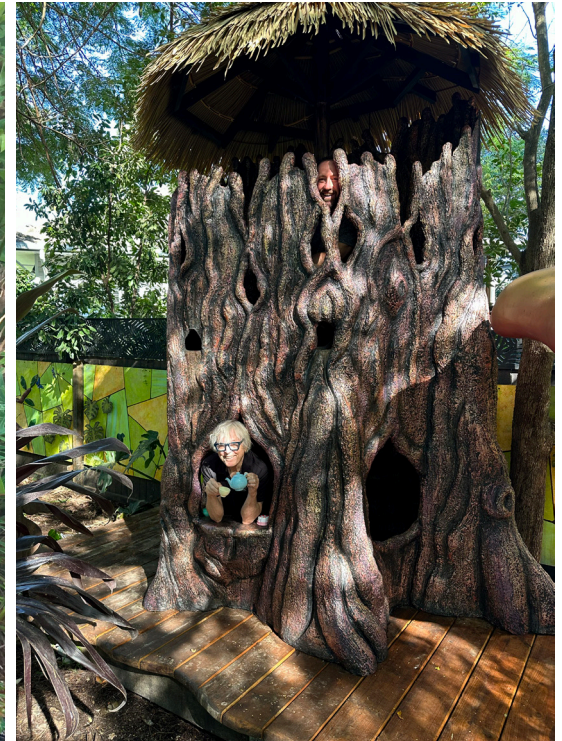

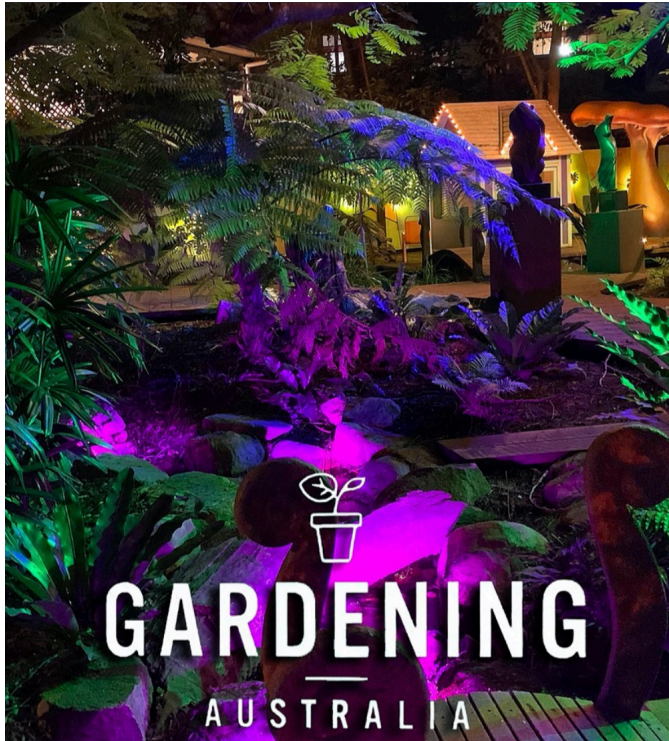

HAND CAST

Each column was hand cast in concrete and allowed to cure in the mold for around six weeks.

Because the columns were hand cast, there are small 'imperfections' that make each one unique. There is also the tell-tale signs of having lived in a very popular park.

The columns were originally acid-stained to give them a stone-like look. They have recently been restored with a fresh acid-staining and a protective coating applied.

ABOUT CIVOSITY PARK

As featured on the Gardening Australia TV show, David has turned his entire yard into a public park which is loved by people of all ages.

David has financed the development of the park. David is an artist, sculptor and placemaker who has worked on creating great public spaces around the world.

“Civosity” is a combination of civility and generosity. Sale of the columns will help the continued development of Civosity Park.

READY FOR TRANSPORT

All of the columns are detached from their bases and ready for transport.

David is willing to build a transportation crate for each (similar to picture opposite).

Cost

Valued at $6,800 each.

For quick sale, due to renovations starting soon, $4,800 each.

12 columns available.

Pick up and transportation is your responsibility.

This is your opportunity to own a piece of the history of Civosity Park, and help with it's continued development.
